Got a Data Breach Alert? Don't Ignore It. Here's How to Protect Your Information.

Your most sensitive data is online. Sure, you don't just post your banking details and medical records anywhere, but hackers still find them – then sell them to anyone willing to pay. If you're in the habit of ignoring data breach alerts, it's worth taking steps to safeguard your data after you've been exposed. It can, and very well might, get worse if you don't.
